Nana, I don't even know where to begin. Some time has passed and it still feels like yesterday. Scarlett, who was on the way when you passed, is now 7 months old and the happiest baby you could ever see. Tyler turned 2 years old and is in fact, just like his father. Sabrina is now 7 and has been doing so well in school. You'd be so proud of each of them and laugh at all of them too! There's not a day that goes by, where you dont cross my mind. So many things are still the same, but so much is different at the same time. 27 years of memories and now were all a year older and you're not here. Everyday I wonder, what do I do now? My rock, my best friend, my emergency call when things went bad is gone. Yet, somehow There's a part of you that I feel still, guiding me in the right direction. That makes sense, cus I always knew, when it came time for you to go, you wouldn't ever go too far away from being able to watch over me. Let's be honest, you know I'm always going to need you! We love you and miss you so much! When its my time, just be sure you come and pick me up, to take me home again like you always did. Until then, I'll be sure to make you proud! I love you!
